Longitudes and Attitudes contains the columns Friedman has published about the most momentous news story of our time, as well as a diary of his experiences and reactions during this period of crisis. As the author writes, the book is "not meant to be a comprehensive study of September 11 and all the factors that went into it."

Longitudes and Attitudes: Exploring the World After
To read [Longitudes and Attitudes] is to relive an anguishing year in world history but also to witness a more human-size drama: Through these dispatches, you see a man trying to explain the unthinkable not only to his readers but to himself."

Longitudes and Attitudes: Exploring the World After September 11 (reprinted as Longitudes and Attitudes: The World in the Age of Terrorism in 2003) is the third book by New York Times columnist Thomas Friedman. Firstly published in September 2002, it consists of articles relating to 9/11 and a brief journal of Friedman's experience around that time.

Longitudes and Attitudes – Prologue. Longitudes and Attitudes. – Prologue. I am a big believer in the idea of the super-story, the notion that we all carry around with us a big lens, a big framework, through which we look at the world, order events, and decide what is important and what is not. The events of 9/11 did not happen in a vacuum.

Longitudes and Attitudes: Exploring the World After

"Longitudes and Attitudes" matches that description very well. It's a collection of his New York Times articles published in the months before and after 9/11, with a closing 75-page "diary" in which he shares additional thoughts on foreign policy, politics, and the seeds of terrorism during this time.
